

Give me a good reason why a bank, credit card company should have the right to call to peddle their additional wares just because I have an account with them. Most of their wares can be seen on the internet and if I want them I'll call them. It is bad enough that I can get 4,5 or 6 calls from the same university asking for money in a single month let alone a bank. I vote NO on letting them have a free reign just because they have or had a "relationship with me."
